

SAILING SHIP

BY: ANONYMOUS

When our loved ones die, it's as if they are on a ship, leaving port and disappearing over the horizon. And those of us left on the dock watch sadly and say, "There they go". And when the ship goes over the horizon we mourn because our loved ones seem to be gone completely, because we can't see them any more.

But, when the ship disappears over the horizon to us, it is just appearing to those at another port. And there are loved ones and fellow believers standing on the dock there who have already made the same journey. They are watching expectantly, and when the ship comes over the horizon and approaches, they cheer and say joyously, "Here they come!".
